

Tomatoes (Large)

The key tomato growing areas in both Florida and Mexico are transitioning northward. In the Palmetto region of Florida, temperatures have cooled which could temper output. Yet, volumes from Florida have been solid as of late, up north of 10% last week from the prior week and from the same week in 2018. Tomato prices may ease in the coming weeks assuming normal shipments from Mexico. The chief lettuce harvest area is also starting to shift northward in California. There are concerns that recent heavy rains could cause lettuce quality problems.
